WORKING LUNCH ON GENDER ISSUES

Every year, in her capacity as OSCE PA Special Representative on Gender Issues, Dr. Fry hosts a working lunch on gender issues during the OSCE PA Annual Session. The theme of the 2025 annual working lunch on gender issues was "Strengthening Support for Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights in the OSCE Region." The event was co-hosted by Dr. Fry and the Head of the Romanian Delegation to the OSCE PA, Ms. Paula Cardoso. Canadian delegates attended the working lunch on gender issues.

Dr. Fry presented the main findings of her 2025 Annual Report on Gender Issues entitled Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights in the OSCE Region – Protecting Gains, Countering Threats. The report discusses recent threats to Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights (SRHR) in the OSCE region and provides recommendations to governments and parliamentarians of OSCE participating States on ways to implement and reinforce SRHR services and protections. In her remarks, Dr. Fry stressed that a lack of SRHR services lead to higher rates of unintended pregnancies, unsafe abortions, maternal death and disability, sexually transmitted infections, gender-based violence, and various problems in pregnancy and childbirth. She also drew attention to specific barriers to access to sexual and reproductive health services facing certain marginalized groups, including LGBTQ+ individuals. For example, she noted, trans people face significant challenges in receiving trans-specific healthcare.

Participants heard a presentation by Ms. Mónica Ferro, Director of the United Nations Population Fund Representation Office in London. Ms. Ferro spoke about the work carried out by the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) in providing population data and supporting SRHR globally. She discussed the findings of a UNFPA 2025 report entitled The Real Fertility Crisis: The Pursuit of Reproductive Agency in a Changing

World, highlighting that many people cannot exercise their reproductive rights and choices and face barriers in creating the family they want.⁷

In speaking to attendees, President Kauma acknowledged that new challenges and barriers to gender equality and SRHR are being observed across the OSCE region. She underlined the role of parliamentarians in ensuring previous gains made in those areas are protected. In his comments, Secretary General Montella highlighted the importance of gender representation in OSCE PA leadership and gender balance in the OSCE PA International Secretariat. He welcomed the work of Dr. Fry as Special Representative on Gender Issues, noting the activities of the Informal Gender Network she is leading.

Ms. Cardoso's remarks and the address by Ms. Ferro were followed by an open discussion among parliamentarians on the challenges and progress in advancing SRHR. Participants were encouraged to discuss the following two questions:

- What are the main obstacles that parliaments and governments of OSCE participating States face in trying to strengthen support for sexual and reproductive health and rights?
- What are some examples of recent parliamentary work and best practices to advance sexual and reproductive health and rights in your country?

OSCE PA members took the floor to discuss these questions as well as other issues relating to gender equality in their country. Participants identified several obstacles, including disinformation and misinformation regarding SRHR and societal resistance to gender-related policies. Concerns were raised about the affordability of childcare, gender disparities in employment, and domestic violence. Despite these challenges, participants shared examples of good practices, such as expanded access to contraceptives, the establishment of parliamentary committees focused on gender issues, and legislative efforts to support individuals experiencing stillbirth. Overall, the discussions underscored a shared commitment to parliamentary cooperation to advance SRHR and gender equality.
